One provision was the setting aside of seventy-five thousand dollars for the care of women whom Thaw believed had suffered through White. The names of the women it is reported will be given in the will. The Thaw will is dated April 4, 1905. The counsel for Thaw today not only declined to make public the text of the will but declared the alleged provisions made public were inaccurate.

ANGLO-AMERICAN GIRL AND NEPHEW OF MORGAN

Wed With Quiet Ceremony But Before Distinguished Gathering Of England's Nobility And Elite.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

London, Feb. 9.—Not for a very long time has a wedding created so much interest in society as that of Miss Evelyn Cavendish-Bentlock, granddaughter of Mrs. Maturin Livingston of New York, and Walter Spencer Morgan Burns, member of the London house of J. P. Morgan & Co., which took place today.

Though it was the desire of the families of both the bride and bridegroom that the ceremony should be a quiet one, the church was crowded with a most distinguished gathering. The popularity of both bride and bridegroom was shown by the great number and value of their presents. A tiara said to have cost $40,000 was only one of Mr. Burns' gifts to his bride. Mrs. Livingston presented to her granddaughter a magnificent diamond collar.

T. Pierpont Morgan, uncle of the bridegroom, presented the bride with a splendid stomacher of brilliant of the first water, designed in Paris.

Among Mrs. Cavendish-Bentlock's presents was a collar of brilliant set in a Greek pattern, with a clasp containing a magnificent emerald. Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, the bride's uncle and aunt, also gave her a collar of superb diamonds.

The bride's father gave a magnificent table centerpiece of silver and a set of dessert dishes. Mr. Lewis Harcourt, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, gave a great chest of silver. The Duchess of Devonshire's present was an exquisite casket of Italian design, which he bought from a Spanish grandee not long ago.

As brilliant and interesting as the wedding itself was the reception and breakfast that followed at the Cavendish-Bentlock house in Richmond terrace. The breakfast was served at five large round tables, which were decorated with the family gold and silver plate. The wedding cake was of gorgeous design and was decorated with dozens of little bells of solid silver swung on silver chains supported by the sugar pillars.

Mr. and Mrs. Burns will pass their honeymoon at Nunham Park, Oxford, the country place of the bridegroom's brother-in-law, Mr. Harcourt.

The bride of today is the twin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cavendish-Bentlock. Her mother was a Miss Livingston of New York and a sister of Mrs. Ogden Mills. Her father, George Cavendish-Bentlock, is head of the collateral branch of the dual house of Portland. His sister is the erratic Lady Sykes, whose legal encounters with her elderly and equally eccentric husband, Sir Tatton Sykes, furnished no end of the entertaining material for gossip a few years ago. The bride herself is very pretty, clever, well educated, and a particularly charming type of the Anglo-American girl. Her twin sister was married last November to Mr. John Ford, in the British diplomatic service.

Mr. Walter Burns, the bridegroom, is well known socially and in the world of finance. As a nephew of J. P. Morgan and head of the London branch of the Morgan banking house, he has been a conspicuous figure in the business world for some years. His present marriage is his second matrimonial venture. When a very young man he contracted a marriage with a Mrs. Wade, once an actress, a beautiful and familiar figure in London, Paris and Monte Carlo. Mr. Burns divorced her and she did not defend the suit.

DOHS NOT ALLOWED TO PLEAD GUILTY

Man Arrested on the Charge of Wife Desertion Will Have to Spend More Time in Jail.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Martin Dohs waived examination in municipal court this afternoon on trial on the charge of deserting his wife and three children on July 13 last was set for Friday morning, February 15, at 10 o'clock. Dohs was very anxious to file a petition for an immediate trial and plead guilty but his counsel, Attorney John Cunningham, would not permit him to do so at this time. The latter, it appears, wishes to have a conference with the young man's father, who is said to have promised to be here today but who failed to put in an appearance. There was a "gallery" of about 100 in the court room, ready to offer testimony had the examination been held. Dohs was arrested in Rockford by Sheriff Fisher last Monday night. So far as his attitude may be judged by what he says, he would rather go to prison than go back to his family.

THREE HURT IN BRODHEAD FIRE

BLAZE STARTED AT MID-NIGHT IN TEMPERANCE SALOON.

FIVE BUILDINGS DESTROYED

Firemen Went Down With Roof and
 One Sustained Fracture of Leg—
 Typhoid Patient in One Flat.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Brodhead, Wis., Feb. 9.—Five two-story business blocks, occupied by eight firms, were razed to the ground by fire early this morning and three firemen were injured when the roof of one building fell. Two families were also made homeless and one woman, who was just recovering from a severe attack of typhoid fever, is in a critical condition as a result of exposure while being removed. The total loss is not yet known, but is estimated at $20,000.

Asleep by Gasoline Stove.
 The fire started at twelve o'clock Friday night in the temperance saloon of Thomas Hellerude. When the blaze was discovered Hellerude was found lying in a deep stupor with one hand on a gasoline stove and the other hand holding a match. To Brodhead people this condition is a satisfactory explanation of the origin of the fire. The flames quickly spread to the adjoining frame structures and through the city fire department soon had two streams of water pouring upon the conflagration and an entire section of the business blocks, extending from an alley to a street corner, was laid in ruins. At one time the fire was thought to be under control but it broke away again and was not finally subdued until half past three o'clock.

Firemen Fall With Roof.
 The roof and walls of all the buildings fell at different times and three firemen went down with the roof of the one-story portion of the old Marshall house. Their rescue from the debris was quickly effected by their fellow workers but nevertheless all three sustained injuries. Jacob Loser suffered a fracture of the leg and slight bruises and burns and Henry Olson and Bert Pierce received cuts and bruises, which with proper attention, will not prove serious.

Sick Woman in Flat.
 Besides the rescue of Hellerude and the accident in which the fire fighters figured there was another sensational incident. In a flat on the second floor of one of the doomed buildings Mrs. Almond Koller lay ill with typhoid fever. She had passed the crisis and was recovering but her removal into the cold night air and the exposure she suffered she could be taken care of by neighbors, will probably result in a relapse.

The Destroyed Property.
 The buildings destroyed were all two-story frame business blocks. On the corner was the old Marshall House owned by Mr. Shorb. This was no longer used as a hotel but Mr. Shorb occupied one portion as a temperance saloon and in another was Hurb's pool and billiard parlor. Both building and contents were total losses. Both floors of the next building were occupied by the Hellerude soft drink saloon and nothing was saved. In the next was Koller's barber shop and Dunbar's laundry on the first floor, while Mr. Woller lived on the second. The fixtures of the barber shop were carried out without being damaged; the laundry equipment was a total loss and none of Mr. Koller's household furniture was saved. Mr. Koller had no insurance.

Alley Stopped Fire.
 Keenan's barber shop was on the first floor and John Nieman's home on the second floor of the adjoining building. The barber's property was mostly removed but the household goods were lost. Next door was the bowling alley and C. E. and M. H. Doolittle and above that Roger's cigar store. The losses in both places were total. A narrow alley runs alongside the bowling alley building and is probably responsible for the saving of Brodhead's entire business district. The fire department worked incessantly in this alleyway and prevented the flames from spreading to the two-story brick building of the Cobb hardware store.

the corner was the old Marshall House owned by Mr. Shorb. This was no longer used as a hotel but Mr. Shorb occupied one portion as a temperance saloon and in another was Hurb's pool and billiard parlor. Both building and contents were total losses. Both floors of the next building were occupied by the Hellerude soft drink saloon and nothing was saved. In the next was Koller's barber shop and Dunbar's laundry on the first floor, while Mr. Woller lived on the second. The fixtures of the barber shop were carried out without being damaged; the laundry equipment was a total loss and none of Mr. Koller's household furniture was saved. Mr. Koller had no insurance.

Alley Stopped Fire.
 Keenan's barber shop was on the first floor and John Nieman's home on the second floor of the adjoining building. The barber's property was mostly removed but the household goods were lost. Next door was the bowling alley and C. E. and M. H. Doolittle and above that Roger's cigar store. The losses in both places were total. A narrow alley runs alongside the bowling alley building and is probably responsible for the saving of Brodhead's entire business district. The fire department worked incessantly in this alleyway and prevented the flames from spreading to the two-story brick building of the Cobb hardware store.

RECEIVING TOBACCO
FOR AMERICAN CO.

Brodhead Manager to Be Here Four Weeks—New Warehouse Will Be Built at Brodhead.

H. T. Keller, manager of the American Cigar Company's branch at Brodhead, was in the city yesterday and received three carloads of tobacco here. Mr. Keller has about four more weeks' work in Janesville this season. He said that his company was now employing 110 hands at Brodhead and would have more if they could be secured. The Brodhead agency is very busy and at present their warehouse floor space is much too small. To relieve this condition a new storage building is to be put up this summer. It will be 60x250 feet and two stories high, with a capacity of 10,000 cases. The building is to be of brick construction and will be located near the warehouse. Had Janesville people known of this proposed expansion, energetic work might have secured this warehouse for the Bower City.

FIRST OF DINING CAR MEN IS DEAD

Ira H. Shattuck, Father-in-law of Janesville Girl, and Man Who Defeated Laura Bigger.

Ira H. Shattuck, known personally and through the newspapers to Janesville people, died in Minneapolis yesterday. A son, W. K. Shattuck of Minneapolis, at one time resided in Janesville and while here wedded Miss Cora Sutherland of this city.

The deceased's name became familiar to the reading public several years ago when the famous Laura Bigger sought the estate of the late Mr. Bennett, owner of the farm named six hundred-acre Bennett farm near Lakeside, New Jersey. Miss Bigger was an actress and claimed to have been married to Mr. Bennett after his first wife's death. Mr. Shattuck was a brother-in-law of Bennett and in the fight for the estate Shattuck won from Miss Bigger.

Mr. Shattuck was the first man to run a dining car on any railway in the United States and at the time of his demise was superintendent of three lines on the Northwestern system. He had also been associated for seventeen years with the late Colonel Wood and A. E. Zonne in the Nicolet Hotel at Minneapolis.

Mr. Shattuck was born in Burlington, Vt., sixty-five years ago. He leaves a widow and five children. The latter are Mrs. Fred McCollan of Minneapolis, Mrs. Fred Kent of Mankato, Minn., W. K. Shattuck of Minneapolis, Mrs. Will Baird of Minneapolis and Ira Shattuck of Mankato.

"Raffles" in a Cast That Has Lived in History.

With the sensational Horning-Presbrey drama, "Raffles," the Amateur Cracksmen, that will be attraction at the Myers Theatre Saturday, Feb. 16, matinee and evening, will be seen the handsome young romantic actor, S. Miller. Keitt, who was selected by Manager Joseph M. Gaits to play the great part of Raffles. He has been associated with the very best actors and managers of the country. He was the leading juvenile in the famous cast organized by Charles Frohman for the Bronson Howard play "Aristocracy," and of which the great manager was so proud that he used on his billing line, "The Cast That Will Live in History." Mr. Frohman's boast was prophetic, for almost every member of that company has since become a star with his her name firmly embedded in the history of the American stage. Among these are: Blanche Walsh, Viola Allen, W. H. Thompson, Wilton Lackaye, William Faversham, Bruce McRae, Paul Arthur, J. W. Piggott, the celebrated English actor, whose brother is the play censor of London, and Mr. Kent himself.

Observing authors like Owen Wister and Alfred Henry Lewis, have pointed out in a certain sense that cowpunchers of long experience are always bow-legged. They get that way from spending most of their time astride a horse. Theatregoers will notice that Ben Higgins who plays Gus Ferts in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and Frank Campanelli who plays Trampas in "The Virginian" both present a rear leg view like a pair of parentheses. Whether they had their legs bent to live up to the characters or whether they were selected for the picturesque roles by reason of their idiosyncrasies is not important so long as the artistic unities are preserved. "The Hell to the Hoar" will be presented at the Myers Theatre, Feb. 20.

THE RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE IN ENGLAND.—The irritation existing among the disfranchised classes of England manifested itself in the most unmistakable manner when the Queen opened Parliament on the 5th inst. All along the line of the procession men with sullen faces, cried "Retorm!" and placards were conspicuously posted so Her Majesty could not fail to see them on which were inscribed the motto: "Men without votes are serfs." The prevalence of democratic ideas among the working classes of England, in preparing the way for a revolution in affairs more marked and important than any that has occurred there within the last two hundred years. While six-sevenths of the population have no voice in selecting their rulers and those who make their laws it cannot be expected that the disfranchised will bear the yoke without murmuring and occasionally attempt to throw it off. The British government lacks one essential principle of a stable government—the content of the governed—and until their nobility will secure that there will be unrest and dissatisfaction among the masses. When Englishmen see the rights of manhood guaranteed to all classes in the Northern States of America without regard to color, race or creed, there will be no security for the Crown or Nobility unless concessions are granted to every man which will allow him all the privileges of the ballot. "Peaceably if we can, forcibly if we must" is now the motto of the reformers, and if the present parliament does not grant the relief demanded, there will be riot and bloodshed and perhaps revolution in England. This is the meaning of those public insults to the Queen.

WISCONSIN WEATHER FORECAST
Partly cloudy tonight and Sunday, slightly colder.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT
With a temperature at 75 and a warm south wind blowing in from the gulf, it is difficult to realize that Dakota blizzards and snowbound trains are a possibility. Only a little thought is necessary to take in the wonderful versatility of climate and surroundings in this fair land which every American delights to call "home."

And yet the fact remains that the average life is circumscribed and shut in by a limited horizon. Year after year we watch the sun as it comes out of the same familiar east, and rejoice in the twilight, as it sinks from sight behind the same old hills. The average young man possesses a desire, early in life, to know something of his country, and he plans to select a spot, where the winters are not too long, nor the summers too hot, for a home, and a permanent abiding place.

He has not traveled, but he is well enough informed to know that he can find for the seeking, just such a spot, for it is true that America has no rival in this respect. The man who wants to live in perpetual summer can be accommodated, with but little effort. But what happens to the young man who planned to choose his location, and why has he been anchored all these years to the town where he was born? The same old, familiar accident. He met the sweet-faced girl whom he had determined to marry, before he had been a man long enough to know it, and the short-lived romances ended in a home on a ten-dollar salary.

That was the end of day-dreaming and the commencement of a struggle for existence, for as the children came along, faster than the salary increased, the question of location was abandoned and fate was sealed. This is the principal reason why so few young men explore their own country before settling down for life. When the late Horace Greeley said, "Go west, young man," he took it for granted that he would make the journey unencumbered, because looking for a location is a good deal like prospecting for minerals, always expensive, and more or less of a lottery.

A man of 40, from the Klondike, in Chicago, the other day, said, "The west is a great country and after ten years of it, I don't want anything else." He was just preparing to go home by rail to Seattle, and 1,000 miles up the Yukon river to Skagway, from there by stage 400 miles to the Klondike country. The stage trip took nine days and the fare was $150, with six dollars a day added for meals and lodging. "But," he said, "it's a fine trip. The mercury will be anywhere from 40 to 70 below, but we don't mind it. There's no microbes or snakes in our country, but it costs something to live. The man with a team earns $25 a day, but he pays $100 a ton for hay. The smallest piece of money we use is a quarter, and that don't buy much."

Rather a poor country for a wedding trip on a slender income. There may come a time when the country will be accessible to everybody who has an ambition to explore it. When the government owns the railroads, and wealth is equally distributed, traveling will no longer be a luxury.

But socialism is too remote to anticipate with satisfaction, and in the meantime it is well to make the best of existing conditions, which are not so deplorable as they seem. It is said of the east coast of Florida, where 150,000 tourists spend the winter, that the natives live on oysters in the summer, and northern suckers in the winter. The towns from Jacksonville south 300 miles are as dead as a mackerel, nine months of the year. They are noted for fine beaches, and dare-devil auto races, but they are destitute of northern thrift and stability.

But little effort is required to define the cause. The chronic traveler is a drifter, subject to whims and difficult to please. He is not a part of the community, and contributes nothing to it but the dollars spent for luxuries.

A young man on the train for Tampa, the other day, complained of being on the verge of nervous prostration. He was from Philadelphia, and was south on a vacation in search of rest and health; said he hadn't slept for a week, and when the porter came into the smoking compartment, was a good deal exercised because he couldn't get a drink on the train. At the dinner station he found a bottle of whisky and the afternoon was devoted to college songs and frequent draughts from the bottle. He was carried by his station, but told the conductor that he didn't care whether he landed in Tampa or Cuba. He thought both places were good for nervous prostration.

The bays and streams of southern Florida are filled with a rank growth of wild hyacinth. It is a plant which grows top of the water in clusters about the size of a dinner plate and has a bright violet blossom. After a rain or high tide it drifts out in great masses into the bays and rivers, obstructing navigation, and proving a great nuisance.

It is interesting to watch these great bunches of hyacinth as they float out on the tide, and a few hours later to see them drifting back. And so they go back and forth on the outgoing and incoming tides, until cast up on the beach to wither and die.

This drifting aimless experience is like some lives, and they belong to the class which never amount to anything. Better the humble home, the new wife and baby and the ten dollars a week, with ambitions not realized, than the nervous prostration, the bottle and the drifter.

PRESS COMMENT.

Even This is Labeled! Sheboygan Journal: Miss La Follette is not engaged, after all. It was only a stalwart rumor.

Wm. Randolph Was Preoccupied. Milwaukee News: After all we might have had a war with Japan, if Mr. Hearst had not been so busy trying the Thaw case.

Gathering the Evidence. Superior Telegram: Thaw once lost $10,000 to Della Fox just matching gold coins—surely strong evidence that he was "bughouse right."

Weak Mindedness Anyway. Chicago News: One might be tempted to think that there were streaks of insanity in the Thaw family, judging from the family physician it selected.

Why Class Snow as Affliction? Chicago Tribune: California cities are afflicted with fleas, and New Orleans is preparing for its annual campaign against mosquitoes. There are worse things than snow.

Signs of Promise. Milwaukee Sentinel: "Humanity is growing sweeter," remarks a Philadelphia exchange. So it seems. The old style alleged comic valentine is disappearing from the market.

Stars That Interest Michigan. Marinette Eagle-Star: The University of Michigan Observatory is erecting a giant telescope, that will locate a promising high school football player as far west as Madison.

Ice Tough; Ergo Expensive. Madison Democrat: A Chicago paper is authority for the statement that ice will be higher next year because it is frozen so hard that it is difficult to cut. Any old excuse will suffice.

Abolition of Juries in Spain. Exchange: Abolition of jury trials in Spain has been extended to include the province of Citrona and yet the government cannot understand why the perverse anarchists should play ball with bombs.

That Outlaw's Still at Large. La Crosse Leader-Press: A threat from John F. Dietz to kill anybody who comes after him, recalls the fact that the distinguished outlaw is still at liberty in spite of all the resources of the state of Wisconsin.

Stupid of the Judge. Chicago Record-Herald: When Justice Fitzgerald asked the ladies at the Thaw trial if they wished to leave the courtroom to avoid being shocked he must have forgotten why the ladies in attendance had crowded through the doors.

The Cost Counted. Evansville Review: A Stoughton tobacco grower has kept the actual cost of raising tobacco and his figures show a total of eighty-one dollars and fifty cents per acre. With the present market value of tobacco, a good percent of profit per acre is being realized.

A Sentiment That is General. Ashkosh Northwestern: Could the public be assured that if Thaw were incarcerated in a madhouse he would be compelled to stay there during the balance of his natural life, there would probably be less objection to the technical defense of insanity.

Home-First Spirit. Superior Telegram: A Duluth daily paper says that "hundreds of places with superior natural advantages have fallen into the ranks of the also because their people were lacking in the home-first spirit." The statement is undoubtedly correct.

Anticipating For Jeff. St. Louis Globe-Democrat: Now let the United States senate remember. Jeff Davis has been duly elected by the legislature of Arkansas, and the avalanche will strike Washington early in March. By the way, how is Davis on apologies in open session?

Heathen Have Seen a Light. Chicago News: Chinese rebels who have smuggled in 50,000 rifles evidently have discovered that handing a few printed prayers to a wooden boss and asking him to read them at his leisure and do what he can for the donors cuts little ice as compared with a toy like the galling.

Would Let Primary Stand. Madison Journal: The sentiment in the state against the amendment of the primary election law is pronounced and general. If the legislators are wise, they will pass up all proposed amendments. The law as it stands is entitled to at least another test. Until we have another general election no one can say intelligently in what particular it needs changing.

Alarmed About Sen. Whitehead. Geo. Grassie in the Evening Wisconsin: Troublesome times indeed. Things are topsy turvy. Senators Whitehead and Hagemeister are getting to be rank reformers, and Senator Munson and Speaker Ekern are getting to be eminently conservative. And so, Harmony which we all have been striving for so zealously and against so hard, is in danger of being upset again because the cycle of events is turning clean over instead of only half way.

Seed Graft Still Lives. Delavan Enterprise: The dream was vain. The wayback congressmen could not forego their precious free seed graft and despite the adverse report of the committee the free seed item was included in the appropriation bill by a decisive majority. Well, we may as well figure on getting our gardens ready—and be sure to plant the congressional seeds early so that if they fail to grow, they may be replaced by the good reliable article purchased from the local stores.

Uncle Sam, Not "Some Statistician." Beloit Free Press: Some statistician has discovered that during the past 20 years 1,023 men have been granted to Rock county couples. This may be true, but the discoverer, to point his tale with a moral, ought to have also given the number of marriages in the county during the same period, so that some sociological conclusion could be drawn from the statistics. As it is, however, one is apt to think that if "marriages are made in heaven," there is much reason to believe that they are unmade in Janesville.

Britain's Treaty With Japan. Chicago Chronicle: Exalted British officialdom at the Pilgrims' club banquet in honor of Professor Bryce was particularly strong on the ties of blood, etc. We should, perhaps, be more appreciative of these sentiments if it were not for the knowledge that exalted British officialdom has contracted by treaty to wage war on American blood relations in the event of the blood relations coming to a rupture with certain Mongolians. British appreciation of the ties of consanguinity is apparently restricted to Pilgrims' club dinners.

Edeson's Slush-maker Challenged. El Paso Herald: Robert Edeson's press agent, sends out the following note about the actor who spent in his car through El Paso when he was booked to play here, and did not pay any more attention to the city than if it had not been on the map, claiming that he "has never missed a performance," evidently forgetting the El Paso incident if there are not others similar in the career of the actor. "In order to hold his record of never having missed a performance since becoming a star, Robert Edeson was recently compelled to work a handcar 31 miles into Shreveport, La."

Mr. Edeson, who has been touring the south in "Strongheart," and who on the movement from Fort Worth, Texas, to Shreveport, La., was entertaining a New York girl in his stateroom, became so interested in the conversation that he failed to leave the train at the junction, etc., etc.

How I Bought a Gun. "Forty years ago," says an old newspaper man, "my wife and I decided to start life right, by having a savings bank in the house."

"We felt the need of it, for our wedding trip had been made on money advanced by a good-natured friend on a slender salary account, already drawn on to the limit. "Some incidents of this wedding trip might be of interest. It certainly made an impression on my mind at the time. It was on the 23rd day of October, 1866. Early in the morning one of those cold, drizzling rains set in, and by ten o'clock the day was soggy and gloomy."

"The wedding was to occur at noon, and a carriage had been engaged to drive us across the country, to the town unites, to the nearest railroad station. "The liveliest man came around in due time, to beg off, but an extra four dollars, added to the ten already promised, induced him to make the trip. I had seventy-five dollars of borrowed money in my pocket, and after paying the clergyman ten dollars and the liveliest man fourteen dollars there wasn't enough left for a very long trip, especially as we proposed to set up housekeeping on our return, with no furniture in sight."

"My wife brought to me a glad smile, but nothing else in the way of visible property, except good health and a willingness to do her share. My assets consisted of a wedding suit and an umbrella with a salary of sixty dollars a month if I ever got caught up."

"The wedding was all that could be desired and we spent four hours in driving fourteen miles through the rain and mud, and then boarded a caboose loaded with laborers and rode on a freight train until midnight. "In the morning the weather had cleared and came off cold, and when we pulled up to the old Pennsylvania house in Freeport, with a bus full of passengers, the ground was frozen and the stars sparkling in the still, frosty air."

"The good natured German landlord said he had three beds to accommodate eleven guests, but it was absolutely necessary for me to have one of them because we were tired, so the old lady who followed us upstairs, looking for a place to sleep, was obliged to sit up in the parlor."

"We spent a week and forty dollars on our honeymoon, trying to have 'a good time,' and succeeded, but when we got back to earth, with fourteen dollars to commence housekeeping, trouble commenced."

"We hired a furnished house, took a man and his wife to board, and the play was on. If you never took boarders for company you have missed a lot of fun, for that's all there is in it. "Our boarders monopolized the house and paid for the first three months with canned goods which they had put up while housekeeping."

"We lived on the top shelf, but the fourteen dollars looked like thirty cents before the campaign was fairly launched. We stood it for a while and then broke up and went to boarding. "This is where the gun came in, for we were getting desperate and decided that nothing but a savings bank in the house would ever command a fortune. So we put a handkerchief box under the bed and put into it all the dimes and nickels we could get hold of."

DEADLY AUTO RACING.

How the Speed Mania Turns Men Into Veritable Fiends.

The list of men who have lost their lives in the pursuit of automobile racing is a long one, quite long enough to stamp the game as one of extraordinary hazard. By the merest stroke of good fortune the name of Fred Marriott, whose car was smashed to pieces at Ormond Beach, Fla., recently, will not be added to it, but he joins the even larger company of those who have faced dire peril in the effort to win prizes or break records with high powered creations and lived to relate their sensations.

Yet the mania for speed never dies out, and the number of would be record breakers may safely be said to nearly approximate the number of automobiles sold. At some time or other the desire to push a car to its limit comes to every man who grasps a steering wheel. Legislators have warned against the automobile scorchers, cities, towns and villages have passed ordinances prescribing fines and imprisonment for those who violate the speed limit; thousands and thousands of dollars have been paid out to placate the municipalities whose regulations have been broken, but the scorchers multiply.

Describing the speed mania, Charles Jarrott, the veteran English driver of racing cars, says: "I have seen a gentle old man almost a patriarch in appearance, incapable in ordinary life of acting inconsiderately to any one, but who when seated behind the wheel of a powerful car seemed to be possessed by the concentrated energy of a thousand fiends, and, regardless of everybody and everything on the road, he has dashed along, having the sole idea in his mind of traveling faster and still faster."

"Men not possessing sufficient courage to enable them to climb a high ladder on the side of a house seem nevertheless to be able to drive a motor car at great speed without turning a hair and without feeling that the performance is attended with danger either to themselves or other users of the road. The intoxication of speed seems to lift them out of themselves and change them into new creatures."

Prominent among those whose lives have been sacrificed in the pursuit of speed with automobiles may be mentioned Ernest Keeler, whose death occurred at the Point Breeze track near Philadelphia; a few weeks ago; Day, who was killed at Milwaukee; Frank Croker, who was pinned under his car at Ormond Beach two years ago in an accident very similar to the one that happened to Marriott; Rigby, who was killed on Long Island, New York; and Tom Cooper, whose death occurred in New York a few weeks ago. Cooper was the only one who did not meet death in actual racing, but apparently his car was going at racing speed.

Marriott joins the list of injured among whom may be mentioned the following, whose cars have run through fences, turned over in competitions or who have been tossed headlong through unexpected breakdowns:

Webb Jay, injured at Buffalo, retired; Kiser, injured at Cleveland, retired (leg amputated); Dr. Thomas, injured at Chicago, retired; Smith, Nelson, Hawley, Cunningham, Chevrolet, Bernin, Wurgis, Basil and Wildgway, crashed through fences, retired; John Fisher and Champion, thrown from car, injured, retired; Carl Fisher, Winston, Fontenier, Graham, Gornat, Burman, Tracy and Newkirk, retired.

Probably Marriott's greatest regret was that the accident, if it had to happen, did not occur after he had passed the finish line in his dash for glory. An hour afterward he announced his intention of going back to the racing game as soon as he recovers. Even conservative old England is interested just now in the construction of a track at Brooklands, and one of the first competitions after its completion is likely to be a race in which the winner must average, according to the prescribed conditions, a speed of sixty miles an hour for twenty-four hours. The proposal to hold a twenty-four hour race on the new English track comes from S. F. Edge, who asserts that he seeks to show that the ordinary touring car in its present state of perfection can run an entire day at high speed, but the test would be regarded nevertheless as one of extreme speed.

TOO EXPENSIVE FOR HIM.

Cocktails Were a Luxury He Couldn't Afford Too Often.

A well-known promoter was invited by a friend to have a cocktail before dinner the other night at the Waldorf, says the Saturday Evening Post. "Cocktail?" snorted the promoter, indignantly. "Did I hear you say cocktail? Don't use that word when you talk to me, if you wish to remain my friend. Cocktail? Do you think I'm Rockefeller?"

"No, but—" "Did you have a notion that I hold it a disgrace to die rich? Well, if you do, don't. I can't afford to pay a million and a half for a cocktail often, but once a month, and that's what one of those devil mixtures cost me last week. Yes, Bill, $1,500,000. In this same identical cafe, talking business. Explain? Cert! The other day I was here with a party of men from Canada who had a mine to float. I listened to their story, and, as they had been vouched for by friends whom I trust, and besides which I wasn't separating myself from six cents, I believed them. I told them I'd turn the trick for them. They wanted only about $750,000 for it. I became quite enthusiastic as I thought of the fat and juicy curb market in our midst; and I suggested a 600,000 share company, par value of same five dollars each. Those bloated Canucks demurred at this. They said they didn't want any water in theirs, and asserted that 300,000 shares, at five bricks per, was ample in their estimation. "Did you ever? I stuck out for 600,000—it was only $3,000,000—but they insisted that 300,000 shares were enough. There was a deadlock, and I suggested cocktails—I ordered them. It was not my best drink and it made me feel so good-natured that I gave in to them. The stock went in a week. I could have sold a million shares, leave alone 300,000 the cocktail made me consent not to issue Cocktails? Take one with a strong dash of prussic acid, will you?"

Were Only Survivors of County Board of Half Century—Mr. Tripp Attended Funeral.

William H. Tripp, of the town of Rock, stopped in the Gazette office this morning, being enroute to Evansville where he attended the funeral of the late Joseph K. P. Porter this afternoon. Mr. Tripp was an old friend of the deceased and served with him on the Rock county board of supervisors fifty years ago. Mr. Porter's death leaves Mr. Tripp, the only survivor of that board. For the past few years Mr. Porter had been the only man residing in Wisconsin who had ever looked upon the face of the great French friend of the United States, the Marquis de Lafayette in Boston in 1824. This was the occasion his visit to America to accept the return of the money which he had loaned George Washington and by which the continuation and culmination of the war of the revolution was made possible. Mr. Porter was present when Henry Clay, then speaker of the House of Representatives, welcomed Lafayette to the country. Mr. Tripp recalls that Senator Macon of Missouri was the only congressman to vote against paying the interest on this loan.

At her home, 301 South High street, Mrs. Fred Wilbur entertained twenty-four women at a delightful afternoon party yesterday. Apropos of the approach of Shrove Tuesday the home was very prettily decorated with hearts and sprays of jonquils and the valentine idea was further carried out at the tables. In a guessing contest in the early part of the afternoon Miss Elizabeth Joyce won the prize. Cinch was played later, the high score trophy falling to Mrs. Clarence Hemmens and the luck number award to Mrs. Joseph Scholer. A delicious two-course luncheon was served.

Thirty ladies of the Order of the Eastern Star Study Class entertained their husbands in the masonic hall last evening. This is an annual event and after the usual banquet, which proved most pleasing, the game of "500" was played, prize and consolation. After an illness extending over nearly two years death claimed Harold Leon Smith at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Smith, 153 Cardell avenue, at three o'clock this morning. A year ago last November he went to Phoenix, Ariz., in hopes of regaining his health. He returned home last March. Mr. Smith was born October 24, 1887, and after going through one of the local graded schools spent two years in the high school. He then worked for a time in the Janesville Machine company's plant and among his fellow workmen and his schoolmates he was well liked. The funeral will be held from the home Monday afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. R. C. Denison officiating.

Mrs. Eliza McDonald, daughter of Mr. McDonald, aged eighty-two, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Churchill, in the town of Hesperia, at 4 o'clock this morning. THEATRICAL PEOPLE FRIENDS OF THAWS

Mabel Barrison Tells of Acquaintance—S. Miller Kent Claims to Have Seen Tragedy.

Though actors and actresses are now making capital out of their distant or alleged acquaintanceships, and friendships with Harry K. Thaw and his wife, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, and getting long columns of the best kind of theatrical advertising, there are some no doubt whose stories of the murderer and his wife are not made of "whole cloth."

Mabel Barrison, who with her husband, Joe Howard, made a hit of the season here in "The District Leader," is a personal friend of Mrs. Thaw and is acquainted with Mr. Thaw. Last night in Denver, where she is now appearing, she said: "I met Evelyn Nesbit in 1902, while I was playing the leading juvenile role in 'Babes in Toyland' at the Majestic theatre, New York. She with Mr. Thaw occupied a box and at their invitation I went with them to a supper at Delmonico's. Having known Mr. White, as he is the first person an actress usually met in New York, I was interested in meeting Miss Nesbit, for it was well known that her ruin had been accomplished by White. Afterward she practically admitted that to me. We always called Harry Thaw 'Crazy Harry.' It was his nickname. Not because we really thought him crazy, you know, but simply that he was so impulsive and generous. He was all of that. He wanted to send me to one of the finest teachers of singing and have my voice trained. It was just as he always ready to do something for somebody. White and Thaw were bitter rivals, each spoke bitterly of the other. Many a time Harry Thaw has spoken of White as a blackguard, and White was never slow to return the compliments."

Another personage in the theatrical world who is particularly interested in the outcome of the trial is S. Miller Kent, who appears here at the Myers Grand a week from tonight, playing the title role in "Raffles." He not only knew the Thaws and Mr. White but was an eye witness to the shooting. In Milwaukee the other day Mr. Kent said: "I had dropped into the Madison Square theatre with a friend. I saw Thaw walking up and down, clad in an overcoat, which I remember I thought odd because of the time of year being summer. A few feet away I saw White at his table. Thaw passed and repassed close to my elbow several times. Suddenly out of the corner of my eye I saw the flash of the revolver discharge. Then came another flash. Then a silence of fifteen seconds and the final shot. I saw White sink forward. I saw him fall. I saw the waiters spread a tablecloth over his face. I couldn't realize the thing all at once. I know I was horror stricken, but at the same time felt that because of the peculiar circumstances attending the tragedy, and its causes I could not be of benefit as a witness during the trial. When Mr. Thaw came to the footlights and told the thousand or more people to quietly retire I went to the stage at back and got downstairs, while the police were questioning and holding everybody they thought knew something about the affair. I got in a cab and was driven rapidly up to Rector's. The papers have related in great detail and with more or less accuracy the conversation that ensued between Thaw and his wife. It is a fact that they kissed after Mrs. Thaw had bemoaned the trouble that would come upon them, in consequence of the act. Somebody had seen me rolling away, it seems, and the detectives later got a description of me. The longer the detectives were baffled in locating the man who had been an eye witness of the killing and who had gotten off the more important, a witness they thought he must be. So they were on the lookout for me for weeks while I was right in New York. As to Thaw? O, he's insane, all right. I've met him for years at various resorts, and he was always looked upon more or less of a freak. His whole life shows it. I've seen him in resorts staggering around from table to table peering at people sitting there, in a perfectly lunatic manner. When I left New York the general sentiment there seemed to be that he would be acquitted either because of insanity or because it was thought he had put upon him a trouble that many a stronger minded man would have broken down under. Since I've gotten farther west, however, I've heard reports expressing more sympathy with the White end of the tragedy."

THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES

By MEREDETH NICHOLSON
MINOR OF THE AMERICAN LEGATION IN LONDON

"Oh, yes, I would, I'm really an old friend!" I insisted, feeling more like an old friend every minute.

"Well, don't tell! But they caught me flitting—with the grocery boy! No aren't you disgusted?"

"Thoroughly! I can't believe it! Why, you'd a lot better flirt with me," I suggested boldly.

"Well, I'm to be sent away for good at Christmas. I may come back then if I can square myself. My! That's slang—Isn't it adorable?"

"The Sisters don't like slang, I suppose."

"They loathe it! Miss Devereux—you know who she is!—she spies on us and tells."

"You don't say so; but I'm not surprised at her! I've heard about her!" I declared bitterly.

We had reached the door, and I expected her to fly, but she lingered.

"Oh, if you know her! Perhaps you're a spy, too! It's just as well we should never meet again. Mr. Glenarm," she declared haughtily.

"The memory of these few meetings will always linger with me, Miss Armstrong," I returned in an imitation of her own tone.

"I shall soon remember you!"—and she folded her arms under the cloak tragically.

"Our meetings have been all to few, Miss Armstrong. Two, exactly, I believe!"

"Then you prefer to ignore the first time I ever saw you," she said, her hand on the door.

"Out there in your canoe? Never! And you've forgiven me for overhearing you and the chaplain on the wall—please!"

She grasped the knob of the door and paused an instant as though pondering.

"I make it three times, without that one, and not counting once in the road and other times when you didn't know, Squire Glenarm—I'm a foolish little girl to have remembered the first. I see, now how blind I have been. Good-by!"

"She opened and closed the door softly, and I heard her running up the steps within."

I ran back to the chapel, roundly abusing myself for having neglected my more serious affairs for a bit of silly talk with a school girl, fearful lest the opening I had left at both ends of the passage should have been discovered. Near the chapel, I narrowly escaped running into Stoddard, but I slipped past him, found my lantern, pulled the hidden door into place, and, traversing the tunnel without incident, soon climbed through the hatchway and slammed the false block securely into the opening.

CHAPTER XIII.
A Pair of Eavesdroppers.

When I came down after dressing for dinner, Bates called my attention to a belated mail. I pounced eagerly upon a letter in Laurence Donovan's well-known hand, bearing, to my surprise, an American stamp and postmarked New Orleans. It was dated, however, at Vera Cruz, Mexico, December 15, 1901, and gave a characteristically racy account of his efforts to dodge the racial detective who was pursuing him. He hoped, he wrote, to cross the borders into Texas, but declared that he should keep clear of Indiana, as he was unacquainted with the Indian language.

Bates gave me my coffee in the library, as I wished to settle down to an evening of reflection without delay. Larry's report of himself was not reassuring, despite its cheerful tone. I knew that if he had any idea of trying to reach me he would not mention it in a letter which might fall into the hands of the authorities, and the hope that he might join me grew. I was not, perhaps, entitled to a companion at Glenarm under the terms of my exile, but as a matter of protection in the existing condition of affairs there could be no legal or moral reason why I should not defend myself against my foes, and Larry was an ally worth having.

My neighbor, the chaplain, had inadvertently given me a bit of important news; and my mind kept reverting to the fact that Morgan was reporting his injury to the executor of my grandfather's estate in New York. Everything else that had happened was tame and unimportant compared with this. Why had John Marshall Glenarm made Arthur Pickering the executor of his estate? He knew that I detested him, that Pickering's noble aims and high ambitions had been praised by my family until his very name sickened me; and yet my own grandfather had thought it wise to intrust his fortune and my future to the man of all men who was most repugnant to me. I rose and paced the floor in anger.

My rage must fasten upon some one, and Bates was the nearest target for it. I went to the kitchen, where he usually spent his evenings, to vent my feelings upon him, only to find him gone. I climbed to his room and found it empty. Very likely he was off conferring with his friend and fellow conspirator, the caretaker, and I fumed with rage and disappointment. I was thoroughly tired, as tired as on days when I had beaten my way through tropical jungles without food or water; but I wished, in my impotent anger against I knew not what agencies, to punish myself—to induce an utter weariness that would send me exhausted to bed.

The snow in the highway was well beaten down and I swung off countryward past St. Agatha's. A gray mist hung over the fields in whirling clouds, breaking away occasionally and showing the throbbing winter stars. The walk and my interest in the alternation of starlight and mist-wrapped landscape won me to a better state of mind, and after tramping a couple of miles, I set out for home. Several times on my tramp I had caught myself whistling the air of a majestic old hymn, and smiled, remembering my young friend Olivia, and her playing in the chapel. She was an amusing child; the thought of her, further lifted my spirit, and I turned into the school-park when I reached the outer gate with a half-recognized wish to pass near the barracks where she spent her days.

At the school gate the lamps of a carriage suddenly blurred in the mist. Carriages are not common in this region, and I was not surprised to find that this was the familiar village hack that met trains day and night at Anahanda. Some parent, I conjectured, paying a visit to St. Agatha's, possibly—and the thought gave me pleasure—perhaps the father of Miss Olivia Gladys Armstrong had come to carry her home for a stricter discipline than Sister Theresa's school afforded.

The driver sat asleep on his box, and I passed him and went on into the grounds. A whiff seized me to visit the crypt of the chapel and examine the opening to the tunnel. As I passed the little group of school buildings a man came hurriedly from one of them and turned toward the chapel.

I first thought it was Stoddard, but I could not make him out in the mist and in my uncertainty waited for him to put 20 paces between us before I followed.

He strode into the chapel porch with an air of assurance and I heard him address some one who had been waiting. The mist was now so heavy that I could not see my hand before my face, and I stole forward until I heard the voices of two men distinctly.

"Bates!"

"Yes, sir."

I heard feet scraping on the stone floor of the porch.

"This is a devil of a place to talk in, but it's the best we can do. Did the young man know I sent for you?"

"No, sir. I kept him quite busy with his books and papers."

"Humph! We can never be sure of him."

"I suppose that is correct, sir."

"Well, you and Morgan are a fine pair, I must say! I thought he had some sense and that you'd see to it that he didn't make a mess of this whole thing. He's in bed now with a hole in his arm and you've got to go on alone."

"I'll do my best, Mr. Pickering."

"Don't call me by name, you idiot. We're not advertising our business from the houseposts."

"Certainly not," replied Bates humbly.

The blood was roaring through my head, and my hands clenched as I stood there listening to this colloquy. Pickering's voice was—and is—unmistakable. There was always a purring softness in it. He used to remind me at school of a sleek, complacent cat, and I hate cats with particular loathing.

"Is Morgan lying or not when he says he shot himself accidentally?" demanded Pickering petulantly.

"I only know what I heard from the gardener here at the school. You'll understand, I hope, that I can't be seen going to Morgan's house."

"Of course not. But he says you haven't played fair with him, that you even attacked him a few days after Glenarm came."

NARROW-WAY GUIDEBOARDS

Contributed by Prof. Z. O. Bowen, Janesville Camp of Melchizedek.

That you may not waste precious years in the valley, but lead direct up the heights unto happiness earned.

1155. The greatest pleasure and duty we know is to assist those earnestly endeavoring to establish their independence to drop their hindrances; to know what is for their good. To lead another wisely is too awful in responsibility never remunerative, seldom thanked and even to instruct should not be lightly undertaken and we wish those more efficient would come to the front and enlighten you. Dearly bought experience is our only proficiency, because we had no teacher; thus are we the more anxious that you who are called to the higher humanitarian service, and those who have outgrown the old and must also go, may greatly shorten your course, and trials by comprehending the magnitude of your endeavor, and may endure no unnecessary hardships or doubt which information would assist you to escape. Hos. 4: 6.

To inform is the purpose of these letters, and we are grateful to the Gazette that we reach an increasing many, yet the number who lack even while earnestly seeking a word of cheer and a ray of light upon their course seems rather to increase.

Is there no one who is given to the Christ Life? (This is not your drawing room steam heated Heaven nonsense, but practical everyday necessity. Religion: Jam. 1: 26, this duty near home is appalling, except to the bible blind, Matt. 23: 3-7, 13-15, who having never known want and injustice could not lead a stray dog if handed the string.) Has the Master go one willing who will assist these which we must refuse because our time is overfull already?

Let them come to church, says a hair-brained stool pigeon! And he held up, Matt. 23: 15, and deceived to increase useless gawgaws? And what avail? Is there a Preacher in Janesville who is near enough to a Saint to even know his own course three hours ahead, Jan. 16: 7-13, let alone advise to another? Does he know the Narrow Way at all, Isa. 35: 8, 9: 13, 1: 9, 3: 9, or why and how things became as they are? Is such an one able to direct you to your part and place in Creation that harmony may reign and you and your posterity prosper? Can he show one raised by his methods from the gutter to a prosperous business and does he bless humanity with even one of those signs which The Master he professes to follow declared would accompany every true disciple? Matt. 16: 17-20.

This work requires an inspired purpose. Grit, husking corn covered wind lodged corn with bleeding hands, through a long cold day at the end of a 90-acre seige is but a starter therefor, impossible to the perfume cured darling and congregation's pet. Isa. 59: 15, 2 Tim. 3: 12. We may well pause and ask where is Humanity bound? Where are her friends? Where is one Christian? Most assuredly not in the church, the Devil's harness will not fit a Saint. Rev. 13: 4, nor does he have "itching ears," 2 Tim. 4: 3-5, 13334 between New York City and Colorado Springs, Sault Sainte Marie and Galveston, have been shown this light since 1892, are reigning their feet, all are doing all we can, and it is not a little. For telepathy is silent but powerful and sure, yet even more seems not necessary and must be forthcoming. Therefore a Society shall be formed here for those who can not as yet utilize telepathy, wherein these instructions shall be given, questions answered, the soul awakened and placed in possession of its powers and life's problems explained for the benefit and gain of your life here, every day and now, leaving all Future Heaven? Promises to the barely 40% Church Dwindling Throng.

Now Friends we are here and proud of our City! It is a good centre of our field. Though our work has been silent it is none the less sure and Janesville has hatched out a something she scarcely dares own but we assure you there is no danger threatened through us, people are too lazy in general for such a line, but if you wish to profit by this advantage, address or visit "The Camp," call new phone 457 (5 to 11 a. m. only) and remember investigation is courted and our results gladly shown, and strangest of all our system is absolutely free, as the Universe of which it is a copy. Scarcity of Brains Grit and Confidence in the Creator, not money, is what hampers this Greatest of Humanitarian efforts. Feb. 7: 3, 5: 11.

Two Cent Rate Bill Beaten.

Pierre, S. D., Feb. 8.—The house Friday evening defeated the two cent rate bill which had passed the senate. This ends the bill for this session.

ICE TRUST EVIDENCE GONE.

Disappears from Office of New York Attorney General.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 9.—All the evidence on which was based the complaint of Attorney General Julius Mayer against the American Ice company for dissolution of an alleged monopoly of the ice business, served on December 20, has disappeared from the attorney general's office and cannot be found. This announcement was made Friday night by Attorney General William S. Jackson.

Mr. Jackson also made public affidavits of employees of the attorney general's office which show that a part at least of the papers were known to be missing late in December before the retirement of his predecessor, Mr. Mayer, but that this was not known to Mr. Jackson until early in January, when, after he himself had assumed office, he took up the case with a view of further proceedings.

BIG SUM FOR EQUIPMENT

Appropriation Necessary Regardless of Whether Digging Is Done by Contract or Not—Doings of Congress.

Washington, Feb. 9.—Secretary Taft appeared before the house committee on appropriations Friday to explain the appropriation of $25,000,000 which the isthmian canal commission has asked to have included in the civil sundry appropriation bill, now under consideration. The secretary of war was accompanied by Chairman T. P. Shonts, of the isthmian canal commission; D. W. Ross, the canal purchasing agent; J. B. Bishop, secretary to the commission, and R. R. Rogers, general counsel to the commission.

Much of the general discussion before the committee concerned the proposed canal contract and Secretary Taft expressed the opinion that the public generally prefers the contract system, as it believes the government can do work cheaper in that manner. However, the appropriation for the canal will not be affected through the failure to grant a contract, as the provision has been made in the bill that the money is to be available for canal work regardless of whether the government does the work itself or lets it out to a contractor.

The proposed appropriation is desired chiefly for the completion of the equipment on the isthmus, and as the government proposes furnishing the equipment to any contractor, it was explained by the canal officials that the allowances for this purpose should be liberal.

Many Pension Bills Passed.

A new high record in the way of the passage of private pension bills was made by the house Friday when 725 bills were passed in an hour and a half.

The naval appropriation bill carrying $95,426,000 was taken up, and under the order of general debate, speeches were made by Mr. Lamar of Florida on the "railroad rate bill," Mr. Higgins of Connecticut favoring the creation of the White Mountain and Appalachian forest reserves and Mr. Mondell of Wyoming on the "limitations of federal authority" and the withdrawal of coal lands from entry.

Passes Indian Bill.

The senate Friday passed the Indian appropriation bill, which has been the subject of consideration throughout the week. Senator Frazier made an address on the subject of state's rights, after which the army appropriation bill, carrying a total of $81,500,000, was taken up. The army measure was partly read for approval of committee amendments and adjournment was taken shortly before six o'clock when it became apparent that considerable debate was to be occasioned by an amendment to permit the government to receive reduced rates from the railroads on the transportation of troops and supplies for the army, and to allow army officers and their families to accept free transportation. The adoption of this amendment would be a modification of the railroad rates bill passed at the last session of congress.

Vernor Townley Acquitted.

St. Louis, Feb. 9.—Vernor Townley, who has been on trial for having shot and killed his brother, Alfred N. Townley, at the Union station on August 4, 1906, was acquitted Friday.

Two Cent Rate Bill Beaten.

Pierre, S. D., Feb. 8.—The house Friday evening defeated the two cent rate bill which had passed the senate. This ends the bill for this session.

FARMERS COLLEGE LITERARY

First Number of New Periodical Is sued at College of Agriculture.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 9.—The first number of a new periodical, "The Student Farmer," has just been issued at the college of agriculture of the University of Wisconsin. The students of agriculture, who now number 600, will publish the magazine monthly with a view to bringing before the farmers of the state the latest results of the experiments and investigations at the state experiment station. The magazine will also be a means of bringing the faculty and students of the college into constant touch with the alumni in Wisconsin and in other states. The first copy contains articles on "Agriculture in Northern Wisconsin" by E. J. Delwiche, '07, superintendent of the northern Wisconsin experiment station; "Riding Sheep for the Show Ring," by Frank Kleinheinz, instructor in animal husbandry; "Education and the Farmer," by John M. True, secretary of the state board of agriculture; "Extension Work in Agriculture," by E. P. Sandsten, professor of horticulture; "A Day in the Dairy School," by E. H. Farrington, professor of dairy husbandry; photographs taken at the college of agriculture; and letters of endorsement by ex-Gov. W. D. Hoard, Dean W. A. Henry of the college and W. B. Richards, professor of animal husbandry at North Dakota Agricultural college. There are also editorials by members of the staff of editors including James C. Milward, editor Madison, '07, assistant, Dallas S. Burch, Milwaukee, '08, manager, George B. Hill, Milwaukee, '08, department editor, Elsa B. Housekeeping by Mail

The practical character of the two courses offered in the correspondence study department of the University of Wisconsin is indicated by the work in home economics. By providing correspondence courses in domestic economy, the department hopes to meet the needs of women of the state. The purpose is to extend to all the opportunities and advantages offered at the university, and as far as practicable the courses are similar to those given resident students. The subjects taught in these mail courses are the selection and preparation of food, house sanitation, and house decoration. The work is planned to give suggestive and helpful information, and to familiarize housewives with the best literature on the problems of housekeeping.

Practical Work in Cooking

In the courses in the selection and preparation of food will be considered the composition of foods and their nutritive value and the changes in them caused by heat and fermentation. The principles of cooking will also be presented with the study of common food materials, such as eggs, fish, cereals, vegetables, and fruit. An important part of the work, not only for housewives but for nurses and hospital attendants will be the subject of food for the sick. The adulteration of food will also form a part of the course, and will doubtless prove of particular interest because of the recent pure food agitation and the resultant national and state legislation which has recently gone into effect.

For Sanitary Homes

House sanitation is the subject of a course by Professor Caroline L. Hunt, head of the department of home economics at the university. She will present the subjects of proper ventilation and means of accomplishing it; effective means of sanitary plumbing, sewage and waste disposal. Problems of lighting and heating under the varying conditions of city and country life will be considered, with practical suggestions. The course also includes a discussion of house furnishings and methods of cleaning them in relation to health and household sanitation.

Big University Banquet

University day will be celebrated at the University of Wisconsin Feb. 22 with a big banquet in the Armory hall at which faculty and students will mingle with alumni, legislators, educators from throughout the state, and all friends of the institution. The committee on arrangements, headed by John E. Baker of Eagle, assistant in the department of public speaking, is planning accommodations for 1,200 at the tables.

The purpose of the banquet is to bring together all those interested in the university, to give them an opportunity to become acquainted, and to gain the inspiration from numbers, as in the pre-jubilee banquet in 1904 which proved so successful. A committee of the faculty, headed by Professor J. G. D. Mack of the department of mechanics and machine design, will cooperate with the student committees on arrangements. A program of ten-minute speeches by well-known men of the state has been arranged, and the various musical organizations of the university will furnish numbers during the banquet. Following the dinner, while the tables are being cleared away for the dancing, which will close the evening, the gymnasium with its facilities for physical training will be thrown open to the inspection of the visitors.

Railroad Building in Canada

The Instinct to Play.

A scientist attached to the Smithsonian Institution at Washington will shortly publish a report wherein he undertakes to show that the desire to indulge in play is a true instinct among the lower creatures. As in man, the tendency to play is stronger in young animals. The scientist in question divides animal sports into a number of classes. Among them are "play-hunting" in which the prey is sometimes such as the animal naturally chases, and sometimes a "make-believe," "play-fighting," "building-play," "nursing-play," "plays of imitation" and others.

TO SETTLE JAP QUESTION

SAN FRANCISCANS AT CAPITAL TO TALK WITH PRESIDENT.

Willing to Make Concessions, Says
Mayor-Schmitz—Probably Will Demand Exclusion Treaty.

Washington, Feb. 9.—Mayor Schmitz and the school board of San Francisco, who were summoned here to discuss the Japanese school question with President Roosevelt, arrived in Washington at 5:35 o'clock Friday afternoon. Their train was 24 hours late. The delegation will be received by the president Saturday.

Mayor Schmitz said: "We have come to Washington with a free mind to discuss the school question with President Roosevelt. The mere fact that we have responded to the president's invitation is sufficient evidence that we stand ready to make concessions if we are convinced that in so doing the entire country will profit by our action. No Californian is willing to stand on any technicality that will work to the detriment of the nation. It would be unfair for us to go into a full and free discussion of the questions involved until we have conferred with Mr. Roosevelt."

"We have not excluded the Japanese children from the schools of San Francisco, but since the fire the school board has found it necessary to adopt the policy of segregation, not exclusion, in the primary departments. The law of California makes the question of segregation discretionary with the school boards in the various towns and cities of the state. The law reads that the school authorities may segregate the children of the white and Mongolian races and requires that when the separate schools have been established the children of the two races must attend the schools set apart for them."

When asked as to how the Japanese children could now be admitted to the white schools, if the delegation agrees to make the concession which the president will ask, Mayor Schmitz replied:

"That would be simple enough. We would abolish the oriental schools, and then, under our law, the enforcement of which as I explained is left to the discretion of the school board, the Japanese would be entitled to admission to the white schools."

"While the Californians profess that they are of a 'free mind' and willing to make concessions, it can be stated on the highest authority that the delegation's purpose is to insist that the president must have a direct understanding with the Tokio government for the exclusion of Japanese coolies before they will agree to abolish the oriental schools of San Francisco and admit the Japanese children to the white schools."

GIVING THEM AWAY

It is almost like giving them away. During January we selected from our stock about 100 Cloaks, odd garments, broken lots, left over from the past two seasons, and marked them down at $1.00 to $5.00, which prices meant a big loss to us. NOW, in order to close them all out at once we offer them at 1-2 of the marked down prices. These are good garments, well made, excellent materials, and good styles, which a look will quickly prove.

The $2.00 Skirts

are moving; actually worth $5 to $10.

The $5.00 Suits

are tremendous bargains; were $10 to $18.

One-Half Price

for our best cloth winter cloaks, and some fine garments left.

FUR COATS

We have about 15 high grade fur coats to sell—the reliable kind—near seal, wool seal, beaver, &c. A chance to make a great saving. Costs nothing to look.
